In 1985, he was arrested again for eight months, accused of establishing a security apparatus for Hamas, known as "Majd

In 1988, Sinwar was arrested once more and sentenced to four life terms after being charged with establishing a security apparatus and participating in founding the movement's first military wing, known as "Palestinian Mujahideen

He was released in 2011 as part of the "Gilad Shalit prisoner exchange deal" (Wafa al-Ahrar), which secured the release of over a thousand Palestinian prisoners in exchange for the Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit

Following his release, Sinwar participated in Hamas's internal elections in 2012, winning a seat on the political bureau of the movement. He also took on the responsibility of overseeing the military wing, the Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades

Sinwar Inside Israeli Prisons

During his time in prison, Sinwar took the opportunity to study the Hebrew language and listen to Hebrew media channels. He analyzed Israeli society to understand its mindset and identify its weaknesses. He authored a novel titled "Al-Shawk wal-Qarnafi" (Thorns and Carnations), where he .discussed his experience of the struggle since 1976

Within the prison, Sinwar also established a unit similar to the Majd security apparatus with the mission of exposing imprisoned spies (known as "Asafeer" (birds) or informers). He appointed detainees to listen to Israeli radio stations and television channels, and to write reports that would be .submitted to him for analysis

During his time in prison, Sinwar was diagnosed with brain cancer and underwent surgery in 2004 .while still imprisoned

Yahya Sinwar – Release from Captivity

In 2006, Hamas captured the Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit, initiating negotiations with the Israelis for a prisoner exchange deal that would secure the release of Palestinian prisoners in return for Shalit's freedom.

During these negotiations, Sinwar played a leading role from inside Israeli prisons. He would sometimes delay the negotiations to increase the number of Palestinian prisoners to be released, even if it meant sacrificing his own chance for freedom. As a result of his insistence and stance, the Israelis placed him in solitary confinement to pressure him into accepting the deal.

Sinwar Challenges the Occupation

The Al-Aqsa Flood Battle – The Largest Palestinian Resistance Attack on the Occupation

In complete secrecy and after strategic deception, Sinwar led the operation against the occupation. While the occupation believed he sought peace and a comfortable life, they were surprised by Al-Qassam Brigades' incursion into Israeli settlements. The operation seized control of multiple areas around the Gaza Strip and inside its perimeter, including Zikim, Sderot, Mivtahim, Kisufim, Deir al-Balah, Khan Younis, Eshkol, and Rafah. Rockets also struck farther areas, including Tel Aviv, Lod, Jerusalem, Ashdod, Ashkelon, Sderot, and Be'er Sheva

The Palestinian resistance succeeded in capturing more than 150 Israelis, most of whom were soldiers, intending to exchange them for Palestinian prisoners

The Martyrdom of Sinwar

On October 17, 2024, the Israeli occupation army announced the death of Yahya Sinwar, following a direct clash with occupation forces. He died in a manner befitting a leader, not content to manage operations from underground tunnels, but instead choosing to confront the Israeli soldiers on the ground. He was martyred in combat with Israeli forces in the Tel al-Sultan neighborhood of Rafah, southern Gaza Strip. Contrary to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's claims, he was not .hiding in a tunnel

This martyrdom is seen as a "heroic end, deserving of a man like him, for he died with his weapon in hand, not hiding like a rat or using civilians as human shields," as Israel's leaders often claimed. Moreover, he was martyred by chance and not as a result of any sophisticated military or intelligence .operation
