Zionist Massacres – Ain al-Rumaneh Massacre

On April 13, 1975, the Lebanese militia opened fire on a bus returning from the Shatila camp to the Tel al-Zaatar camp, resulting in the martyrdom of 27 people, most of whom were Palestinians. Many of them were members of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, returning from a celebration organized by the Front in a bus passing through the area of Ain al-Rumaneh in the outskirts of Beirut. The Phalanges claimed that the Palestinians had attempted to assassinate Pierre Gemayel.

However, it was a story of "hearts filled" as depicted by the martyr Naji al-Ali.

The Ain al-Rumaneh massacre marked the beginning of the Lebanese Civil War, which lasted for 15 years.

A rare video interview with the bus driver that came under attack by the "Lebanese Forces." The Kata'eb militia members had opened fire on the bus returning from Shatila camp to Tel al-Zaatar camp, resulting in the martyrdom of 27 civilians.
